TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Re: W. Tyler Moore, Jr.

I have professionally and personally known Mr. W. Tyler Moore, Jr., literally, for decades and have been proud to have him represent me. His forte has always been litigation.

I was recently involved in a complicated case in an attempt to collect a substantial amount of money owed to me. I have always appreciated the advice that an attorney who represents himself has a fool for a client. So, my first call was to Mr. Moore.

This particular case had many moving parts. It involved claim for attorney fees on three interrelated representations. One client was now deceased and two of the other clients were heirs of the deceased client. To further complicate the matter, one of the surviving clients was also the executor of the deceased client's estate. They filed a retaliatory claim against me for negligence.

Mr. Moore thoroughly researched the law and prepared a response that was on the verge of having their claim against me totally dismissed out-of-hand. It was only then that the executor chose to pay and settle my suit against both him personally and against the estate.

Based on my own personal experience, as well as my knowledge of his representation in the legal community, I would not hesitate to recommend Mr. Moore as a competent litigation attorney. He represented me well.

Respectfully submitted,

Stephen L. Baker
